The Homeschool Records Starter Kit

A state requirements worksheet, an undated lesson track (example), a family week for up to 4 kids (example + blank), a 180-day attendance grid and a catch-up page for when you fall behind.

TAB 1 · PLAN

My state's requirements

Laws differ a lot from state to state, from almost no rules to notices, hour minimums, tests and portfolio reviews. Look yours up once a year at your state education department or a state homeschool organization, and write the answers here.

State _____ Checked on (date) _____

Where I checked (website / organization) _____

TOPIC	QUESTION TO ANSWER	WHAT MY STATE SAYS
Notice	Do I need to tell anyone (school district, state)? By what date each year?
Days or hours	Is there a minimum number of days or hours? Does it count per year?
Subjects	Are certain subjects required? At which grades?
Records to keep	Attendance? Hours? A portfolio of work? For how long?
Tests or review	Standardized test, portfolio review or evaluation? Which grades, by when?
Teacher rules	Any parent qualification or supervision requirement?
High school	Credit or graduation rules? Who issues the diploma and transcript?

Deadlines this year

So I will keep these records

- ☐ Attendance (days)
- ☐ Hours by subject
- ☐ Curriculum + book list
- ☐ Work samples, start + end of year
- ☐ Test or review results
- ☐ Field trips + activities
- ☐ Notice / letters you filed
- ☐ High school: transcript + course descriptions

Not legal advice. Homeschool laws differ by state and change over time. This planner helps you organize your records; it does not tell you what your state requires. Check your state's current law (your state education department or a state homeschool organization) before you rely on any record.

TAB 1 · PLAN

Lesson tracks: example

Plan by lesson, not by date. Each day you do the next lesson on the track. A sick day moves nothing, so there's nothing to rewrite. Shade a box when a lesson is done. The ringed box is today's lesson.

The flu took a week? Nothing changes on this page. Leo's next lesson is still 75. If a track falls behind, the Catch-up page shows you how far, and what to do.

TAB 2 · WEEK

Family week: example

Every child's week on one page. Write lesson numbers from the tracks ("Math L62"), not whole lesson plans. Tick attendance in the last column.

Why it works: one glance shows who needs you and when, what the kids do together, and which day is light. Tomorrow's line is just the next lesson numbers.

TAB 1 · PLAN

Behind? Catch-up page

Falling behind on a dated plan feels like failing. On lesson tracks it's just a number. Work it out here once a month.

IF...	THEN...
Sick day or busy week	Do nothing. The next lesson waits for you on the track.
Behind on one subject	Add one extra lesson a week, or combine two short lessons.
Behind on everything	Check the projected finish date. Trim review lessons or run 2 weeks into summer.
Ahead	Take a break week, or go deeper on what they love.

Projected finish

CHILD	SUBJECT	LESSONS LEFT	PER WEEK	WEEKS LEFT	SCHOOL WEEKS LEFT	ON TRACK? / PLAN
Maya	Math	89	4	23	20	3 weeks short: do 5 a week until March

Weeks left = lessons left ÷ lessons per week. The tracker does this for you and shows a finish date for every curriculum.
